Dear Folks:

I've had a real good time getting these old hymns together and I hope you enjoy singing them as much as we do.

You'll find in the book here most of the old tunes, but of course there'll be a couple now and then that you'll think ought to be in, but aren't. Now if I was suggesting I'd say to kick just about enough to get a dollar's worth of enjoyment out of it, but not so much so you won't enjoy the other tunes that you do find. Some folks try to get a twenty-dollar kicking license out of just one dollar, but of course that isn't in proportion.

One thing about singing these old tunes is they make everybody feel as if they were neighbors. A neighbor is a man, you know, who tries to make living a mite more fun for everybody and when a man gets feeling this way he's pretty sure to catch religion. One thing to remember, though, is that if you're a neighbor it doesn't make much difference what color the church is painted that the other neighbor goes to. If he's a good neighbor you can feel sure he's got a pretty good religion, too. The proof of the tree is the taste of the apples.

Most cordial,

Seth Parker

Phillips Haynes Lord the Creator of Seth Parker

PHILLIPS HAYNES LORD is the son of Dr. Albert J. Lord, minister of the First Congregational Church of Meriden, Connecticut. He was born in Hartford, Vermont, July 13, 1902, but within a year the family had moved to Meriden.

As a boy Mr. Lord spent his summers in Ellsworth, Maine, and the greater part of this time was given to riding throughout the countryside with his grandfather, Hosia B. Phillips, who was one of the old school of New England gentlemen. As they rode together in the old buggy, his grandfather told him of folks he had known and it was Mr. Lord's privilege to meet many of these characters who lived miles off the beaten track. It was on these rides that he came to know and understand the men of the soil to such an extent that he has been able to interpret their philosophy of life with an accuracy which no other writer has yet done.

In 1925 Mr. Lord graduated from Bowdoin College at Brunswick, Maine. He was unusually quick in his studies, but did not lead his class because his interests were many and diversified. He was athletic, full of mischief, loved to do business on the side, and in other words, was just a plain full-blooded American young man. In talking with a classmate we find that his outstanding characteristics at this time were one hundred percent fight and determination to win whatever he went into, and an unlimited amount of vitality.

Although Mr. Lord was not a scholar by nature, he was appointed principal of the Plainville High School in Plainville, Connecticut, four days after graduation. He was then only twenty-two years old, but he had heard of the opportunity and went after it with the same enthusiasm and disregard for obstacles which had marked his college career. Perhaps his determination was whetted by the fact that his girlhood sweetheart, Sophia Mecorney, was teaching in the grammar school of the same town, but the fact remains he was appointed to the position, married Miss Mecorney two weeks later, and in the fall both Mr. and Mrs. Lord started instructing at the high school.

Of how Mr. Lord came to New York two years later, not knowing a soul in the city, and of his fight to break into writing, you have probably read, but the part we are most interested in is how Seth Parker finally was born.

One evening Mr. Lord happened to hear a radio program with a country setting and immediately realized it was not genuine. Sitting down at his desk he started to write one that he felt was genuine, one which was built around some neighbors who went to an old-fashioned singing school each week. He remembered a little town up on the coast of Maine he had heard his grandfather tell about; so he chose Jonesport for the setting and then by elimination of names he chose Seth Parker.

When the script was completed he persuaded a few acquaintances to rehearse it with him and a few weeks later this program was presented from a small station in New York. It was immediately successful.

Mr. Lord did not delay a moment, but taking the little money he had been able to save up, he rented a small office and started selling the scripts to radio stations throughout the country. No one had ever thought of doing this before, but before very long fifteen stations had gotten together Seth Parker casts and were presenting these weekly programs with tremendous success.

By this time rumors had spread to the National Broadcasting Company that Seth Parker was fast becoming a very popular character in radio, and so an invitation was extended to Mr. Lord to meet with the Planning Board and tell of his work. The Board usually grants about ten minutes or so for such an interview, but this time it sat for an hour and a half, laughing heartily and now and then wiping a tear as this young man fairly bubbled over with enthusiasm. The result was that he was given an opportunity to present a trial program.

The following week this same group sat for half an hour as a Seth Parker program was presented upstairs in the studio and was wired down to the Board room. It was good, they decided, very good, and then suddenly, one member spoke up and said, "That was a religious program we were listening to. Do you realize that?"

He was right, too. Mr. Lord had not presented "Seth Parker's Old Fashioned Singing School" at all, but had created an entirely new idea using the same characters as the Singing School. It was a religious program they had been listening to, but it had been so cleverly and beautifully done, they had not stopped to realize that it was anything more than just an entertaining feature.

Now the fact that it was religious may not seem like an important point to the average listener, but there are thousands and thousands of listeners to a network program, and they represent many, many creeds. What would these listeners say to a religious program in which there was plenty of humor and religion was discussed freely? It was playing with dynamite and no one realized it any better than the members of the Planning Board, but they had faith in Mr. Lord's ability and finally told him to present a meeting over the air as a test.

The best proof of the way this test was received is that, from that day to this, Mr. Lord has not even been asked to submit a script to the Broadcasting Company for approval; for he has handled this delicate problem of religion in a wonderful way. Six months after the first broadcast, a well-known New York radio critic made the statement, "I am repelled by religious services over the air and now I find I've been a devout follower of one for six months and didn't realize it was religion to which I was listening."

The program does have more religion in it now, however, than when it first started. This is because Mr. Lord has certain definite ideals, which he has developed from time to time.

He believes that religion is the result of environment; that those who are born in church-going families in most cases prefer the church of their fathers more because of convenience than because of conviction; that those who come of parents outside of church circles are not reached and the reason is that religion is too closely associated with the church. To use one of Mr. Lord's own illustrations, "The church is a good store house for religion, but you should stock up with an ample supply to take home with you."

Seth Parker believes that religion is tangible; that it is a kind word, a thoughtful deed and is not something apart from every day life.

He has probably done more to make religion a part of the American home than has any other one man.

Bits About the Seth Parker's Hymnal Program

WHEN Phillips Lord appears before the microphone in his character of Seth Parker he bends his knees, completely changes facial expression and acts out every little detail of what he is saying.

Twelve take part in the program.

Not a soul moves during the silent prayer.

Rehearsals for the following week are held immediately after the broadcast, and on the night of the broadcast there is a two-hour rehearsal before going on the air.

The members gather in a semi-circle around the microphone and face Seth, who has a microphone of his own.

The singers are the finest obtainable, but sometimes Mr. Lord will work for a long time in order to make them forget their academic singing and do the hymns in the old fashioned way.

A real spirit of friendship has grown up among those who take part.

The organ which is heard is a genuine old time melodeon.

Lizzy in real life is the wife of Seth and they have two youngsters of whom they are very proud.

The sound of the collection is achieved by dropping match sticks into a tin cup.

Mr. Lord writes each program four times before it is finally produced.

Captain Bang's real name is Raymond Hunter. He is a church singer of long standing and a singing teacher in New York. Mr. Hunter is the original Captain Bang who was with Mr. Lord on the first evening Seth Parker was ever heard on the air.

Jane in reality is Erva Giles, who is heard in many programs over the air. She is a native of Ellsworth, Maine, which is only fifty miles from the real Jonesport.

Edward Wolters is a native of Denver, Colorado. He is occasionally heard as the Captain's brother, although in reality he is always present in the studio singing with the group.

SETH PARKER'S HYMNAL

Gertrude Foster is associated with the National Broadcasting Company. She sings alto.

Polly Robertson plays the melodeon. She played a portable melodeon over seas during the war and is familiar with the old style of playing hymns. She comes from a small southern town.

John is Richard Maxwell, who is heard on many other N. B. C. programs.

Laith is none other than Bennet Kilpack, head of the dramatic department of Brooklyn Institute. He spends much of his time in Kennebunkport, Maine.

One evening while a ten-minute rest was going on, Bennet Kilpack was telling a joke at one end of the studio, while Mr. Lord was at the other end of the studio making a few minor corrections on a script. Mr. Kilpack happened to use a rather peculiar voice in telling the story and in another minute Mr. Lord was across the room making him repeat it; for he realized here was an excellent idea for a new character. Therefore Cefus was born and is played by Mr. Kilpack.

Edward Dunham is always in the studio to be ready with the sound effects, time the program, and look after the details of production.

John Kulik, of the N. B. C., is at the control board to see that the program is modulated correctly when it comes on the air.

Four-fifths of the rehearsal time is spent in making the program homelike and natural. Nothing which is not absolutely natural is permitted to pass Mr. Lord.

The male quartet which is occasionally heard is made up of the male members of the cast who like to sing together.

Mr. Lord plays the guitar for his own accompaniments. He is also adept at the mouth organ.

The fan mail on each program ranges from 500 letters a week to 7,000. Every letter is read.

Mr. Lord always has several dollars in his pocket to use for those who are needy, as listeners occasionally send in a dollar or so to put in the collection, and Mr. Lord uses it as he encounters needy cases during the day.

CRITICIZING

Oft times upon a wintry eve, we'd gather at the store
Where some would play and some would talk and some would simply snore.
But when Hitch Thomas tilted back and started to advise
'Twas worth a year or two at school to hear him criticize.

He'd criticize the town and folks and touch upon the state,
And then he'd go to Washington and criticize the great.
But when he got full steam up he wasn't even awed
To go right up to heaven and criticize the Lord.

For twenty years he criticized but then there come a spell
When old Hitch Thomas shut right up and clumb within his shell.
For weeks he wouldn't say a word, but then there come a night
He tilted back his chair again and started to recite.

"Two weeks ago last Thursday night I'd say 'twas 'bout eleven,
As I was laying in my bed an angel come from heaven.
He sez, 'Now, Hitch, we've heard you talk and think you're pretty wise,
We'd like ter have yer come above and help us criticize.'

Now that's real nice I sez to him, so I put on some wings
And fluttered 'round about the room to kind of test the things.
They worked real good so off we flew and headed for the sky;
It seemed like we was headed down, we flew so awful high.

Now I ain't going to tell yer all the things I saw and done
As Peter pointed out to me the way that things was run,
But I saw proof on proof up there, that made me realize
They should have sent for me before to help them organize.

Now fust they had no government; no state or county seat,
They had no laws or anti-laws to punish them who cheat.
Why, when I showed them this and that they took down every word
And Moses got all tuckered out a-chiseling what he heard.

I criticized things right and left where I was justified,
Until I chanced to spy the Lord a-standing by my side.
He sez to me, 'Now, Hitch,' sez He, 'I've done the best I can
But I have always tried and failed to make a perfect man.

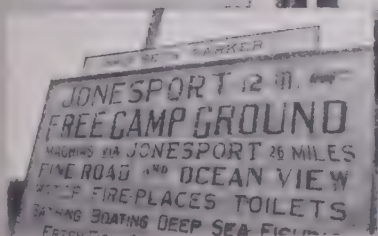

I wonder if you'd take the time to make him up for me
So I can model all the rest from one I really see.'
'Now, Lord,' I sez, 'you set down there while I work out a plan
And then I'll show you what to do to make a perfect man.'

He sat and so I started in to mix a batch of batter
From which I sifted ways of man which I thought were the matter.
I dumped a shovel full of this, and scraped up some of that,
Then next I put a pinch of lean and then a pinch of fat.

As soon as things were all mixed up I got a cup of sense
And poured in just enough conceit to give it recompense.
I put in all the things I knew to make a perfect man
And then I laid the batter in a good-sized baking pan.

A long, long time I baked that dough to give it chance to rise
So when the perfect man was done he'd be of goodly size.
I wasn't taking chances of his coming out all raw
'Cause I was out to make a man, a man without a flaw.

But when I opened up that door and saw that perfect critter
I couldn't for the life of me control an itch to titter.
I laughed at him until the tears just wouldn't let me see
And then the Lord come over there and said that man was me."

SOME VIEWS AT JONESPORT, MAINE

YOU GO TO YOUR CHURCH AND I'LL GO TO MINE

It was about five years ago that the Baptists decided to have a lobster supper and they invited Deacon Withersby, Deacon of the Methodist church, to be the guest of honor.

Well, folks stood around and talked a mite and then they started in on the supper. They'd no sooner set though before Deacon Withersby pulled some peanut butter sandwiches out of his pocket and laid them on the table.

You see, lobster didn't agree with Deacon Withersby so he'd brought along the sandwiches instead. They could have spoiled the whole supper by the Baptists arguing with the Deacon to eat lobster or he could have started the arguing by trying to get them to eat sandwiches. They didn't do it though. They all et what they had a mind to and they enjoyed it considerable.

It sort of brought out to me that what's one man's meat is another man's poison and it give me a little thought that I want to tell you about.

Now I'm not saying religion is like vittals, and yet agin it might be. I wonder perhaps if a brand of religion that's tailored for one man might not be a pretty poor fit for another.

Anyway I've got a little tune here that goes something like this.

JESUS IS MY NEIGHBOR

You know, I was sitting and swinging in the hammock, a couple of days ago, when some lines of the Twenty-third Psalm came to mind. The lines I was thinking about was,

“The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures,
He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul.”

They're awful pretty lines to recite to yourself; and while I was reciting them I looked across the meadow, and it come to me how much more the psalm would mean if we was to have some shepherds around Jonesport, so we could see them every day.

I was sort of churning it over in my mind when all of a sudden I thought, “We haven't got any shepherds, but we have got neighbors; and wouldn't it be a pretty good idea to think of the Lord as being a neighbor?”

There's lots of things about neighbors that are just like shepherds. Shepherds have crooks they walk around with, but Sam Tuttle has one of them. The only difference between a shepherd and Sam is they hold the stick by opposite ends. The shepherd holds it so the crook is on the ground, but Sam holds the crook in his hand and calls it a cane.

The more I thought about it the more I came to see there wasn't so much difference between shepherds and neighbors anyhow; and, seeing the first cousin to a psalm is a hymn, I decided to write a little tune about it.

I don't suppose it's so much of a tune, but I'd like to have you try it over and see how you like it.

WE ARE GATHERING WITH THE LORD TODAY

I hope, if you ever come up this way, you'll stop around at the house and gather with us. I don't know of any better way to spend an evening than by just gathering together.

You know, there's lots of folks who are so busy they forget about the Lord. They turn to Him in the hour of death and sickness and sadness, and sort of get to associate Him with those things, but they forget to go to Him at other times.

If I just had a neighbor who came to me in times of trouble and when he wanted something, I think it would kind of hurt my feelings a mite. I'd want to have him ask me along on his picknicks and good times as well, and it wouldn't surprise me a whole lot if the Lord felt a good deal the same way.

Sunday evenings up here in Jonesport we just get together and have a real good time. The Lord joins in with us,—well, we wouldn't miss' it for all the world.

I've always sort of cal'lated that it's a pretty poor idea to leave your religion in the racks with the hymn books, and we sort of aim to take it home with us. No cathedral was ever built so pretty that you could find the Lord in it any quicker than you could in your own home.

I've sort of got a little tune put together here that we use as an opener when we gather, and if you've got the time I'd like to have you try it over. It kind of makes a big family out of all those who are present.

HEAVENLY JEWELS

Some years ago there used to be a traveling parson that came through Jonesport and for the whole summer he preached in the church here. He could out-orate any two other parsons I ever heard, too.

Now everybody in town used to turn out to hear him, that is everybody except Tim Brown. Tim just wouldn't go, but one time the Parson went around to see him and dared him to come for four weeks running. Tim took the dare and that's how he happened to get there.

Well, sir, the Parson set out to do extrie good and revive Tim who was sitting in the back seat. He swung his arms faster than the Widder Pease' windmill goes after she oils it. He told about the pearly gates of heaven and how the jewels sparkled and all about them.

The next week he commenced on the golden streets of heaven and how precious they were and the third week he got onto harps strung up with camel's hair, and then got onto the crowns of the angels.

After the fourth sermon he went down and got a hold of Tim before he could get out and sez to him:

"Tim, what did you think about it?"

"Well," sez Tim, "it sounded fust rate."

The Parson seen something was troubling him though, so he asked him what it was.

"I heard you tell about the golden streets," sez Tim, "and that harp playing was real interesting, too. I hope I get a chance to see the jewels up there; but honest, Parson, is that where God is?"

For four weeks the Parson had been talking about the precious jewels and the like of that, but he'd got so excited that he'd forgot to tell the big purpose of it all. He was like a little feller on Fourth of July who makes such a big noise with the shooting off of firecrackers that he forgets what the day means.

Here's a little tune that sort of goes along the same order. Perhaps you'd like to look it over.

THERE ARE FOUR IN OUR FAMILY

Last week I hitched up the mare and drove up to Wheelbrook Center to call on the Saunders. Mr. Saunders had been ailing for a long time, and Mrs. Saunders was out doing the chores. Tagging along and doing the best he could to help her, was Billy. Billy's about nine, I guess.

I made it a point to spend the afternoon with them 'cause they've been pretty hard hit of late. Last month pneumonia caught a holt of Billy's twin brother, Jack, and they lost him.

We sort of puttered around, doing this and that; and while we was in the barn Mrs. Saunders set down on the grain bin and I set on the floor, and we had a little chat.

While we was talking, she told me a story about Billy that kind of stuck with me, and that's what I had in mind telling you about.

It seems that he was pretty 'proud of having a twin brother, Jack, and when he'd get to squabbling with the other young ones he'd say, "There's four in our family. Mother and Daddy and Jack and me." After Jack died Billy was so much in the habit of saying there was four in his family, he'd say it without thinking. The other young ones would say, "There's only three of you now," but Billy would keep saying, "There's four. Mother and Daddy—and—and me."

They'd laugh at him and tell him he couldn't count straight; but Billy stuck to it that there was four in his family. Even his mother had to tell him there were only three now. He couldn't seem to believe it, though.

One day he come legging it home from school for dear life and hollered to his mother half way across the barnyard, "Ma, aint' Jesus with us all the time?"

"Of course He is, Billy," she sez.

"There," he sez, beaming all over, "I told you there was four in our family."

Well, sir, when Mrs. Saunders got through telling me that story I guess there were tears in the eyes of both of us. There weren't much praying apparatus in the barn, but we got down on our knees out there by the hay and had a little talk with the fourth member of Billy's family.

When I got home that night I couldn't stop thinking about it; and when I set down to the old melodian a little tune came to me that went something like this.

2. A cit - y so si - lent and lone, Maggie, Where the young and the gay and the best,
3. They say I am fee - ble with age, Maggie, My steps are less sprightly than then;

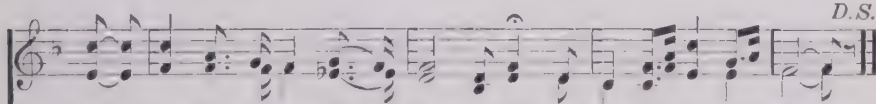

The creek and the old rusty mill, Maggie, Where we sat in the long, long a - go.
In polish'd white mansion of stone, Maggie, Have each found a place of rest,
My face is a well-written page, Maggie, But time a - lone was the pen.

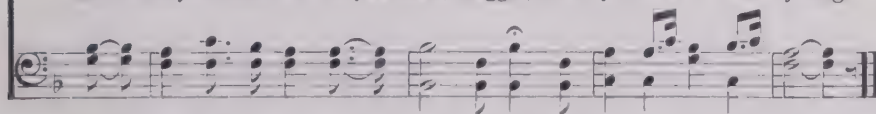

The green grove is gone from the hill, Maggie, Where first the dai - sies sprung;
Is built where the birds used to play, Maggie, And join in the songs that were sung;
They say we are a - ged and gray, Maggie, As spray by the white breakers flung;

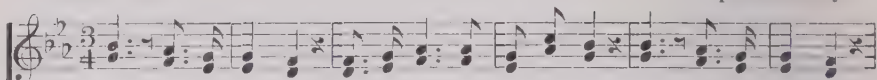

D.S. - And now we are a - ged and gray, Mag-gie, The tri - als of life nearly done,

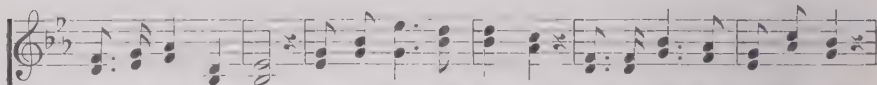

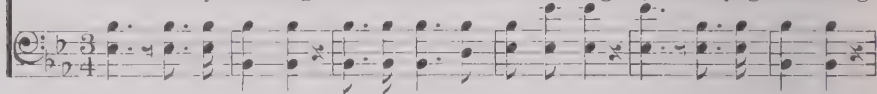

The old rust - y mill is still, Maggie, Since you and I were young.
For we sang just as gay as they, Maggie, When you and I were young.
But to me you're as fair as you were, Maggie, When you and I were young.

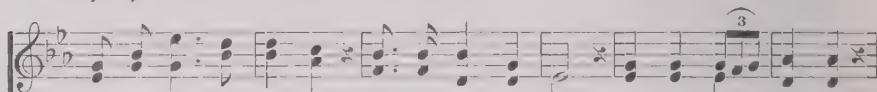

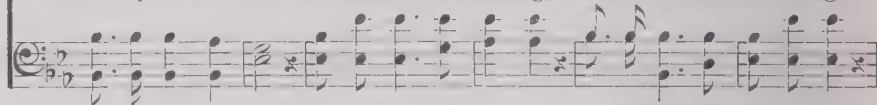

Let us sing of the days that are gone, Maggie, When you and I were young.
